Luján has already introduced 9 separate bills that have fallen under the Committee's jurisdiction. Early in his term, he introduced a bill to protect the Sabinoso Wilderness. He has also introduced legislation to finalize two tribal water settlements that were considered by the Committee on Natural Resources before passing through of the House.

On the Committee on Homeland Security , Rep. Luján focused on emergency preparedness, cybersecurity and improving resources for first responders.

Rep.Luján is also the Chair of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus' Green Economy and Renewable Energy Task Force where he focuses on the role of the Hispanic community in the advancement of clean energy policy.

Rep. Luján's work in Congress to ensure that the Hispanic community is included in the emerging clean energy economy earned him the recognition of one of Hispanic Business Magazine's 100 Most Influential Hispanics.

Prior to his election to Congress, Rep. Luján served as the Chairman of the New Mexico Public Regulation Commission. As a Commissioner, Rep. Luján worked with his colleagues to develop a renewable portfolio standard to increase renewable energy production by New Mexico utilities to 20 percent of their total production by 2020 and to diversify utilities' renewable portfolios to include solar energy. On behalf of the state of New Mexico, Rep. Luján joined his fellow Commissioners from California, Oregon, and Washington to sign onto the Joint Action Framework on Climate Change to create regional solutions to climate change.

With the New Mexico Public Regulation Commission, Rep. Luján advocated for first responders. He worked with firefighters, the state legislature, and other officials to overhaul the New Mexico Fire Fund so that all distributions from the fund would go to improving fire services in New Mexico.

Rep. Luján also worked to improve health care as a member of the New Mexico Public Regulation Commission by investigating the denial practices of the health insurance industry. The investigation led to the development of legislation that expanded access to insurance and closes closed loopholes the industry had been using to unfairly deny medical claims and void policies.

Rep. Luján has also served as New Mexico's deputy state treasurer as well as New Mexico Cultural Affairs Department's director of administrative services and chief financial officer.

Rep. Luján earned his Bachelor's degree from New Mexico Highlands University in Business Administration.
